

MET BROTHER AFTER 24 YEARS

Joyous Reunion in Mullen Family Occurred
Through Accident

After living a part for twenty-four years William E. Mullen, a clerk in one of the restaurants lately greeted his long lost brother, Roy Mullen, whom he last saw in childhood in Keene, this state. The last named man came to this city to engage in some work at Kittery on the Water Works and happened to go into the restaurant for a meal. Speaking to his brother he asked him if he could tell him where Bill Mullen was located in this city, and sure enough he was talking to Bill at the time. For some time it was hard for them to believe that they were the boys of the Mullen family that had been separated by the death of their parents when one was at the age of thirteen and the other six. During the conversation which passed between them they learned that in the

HIGH PRAISE FOR MAJOR LEONARD

Inspector Lauds Conditions at Post Here

Compliments Military Efficiency and Economic Administration

(Special to the Herald.) Washington, D. C., May 8.—Major L. J. Magill, Assistant Adjutant and Inspector of the North Atlantic district, after a tour of this section, has made his report, a portion of which refers to the marine detachment at the United States naval prison at Portsmouth as follows:

The Inspector deems it his duty as his privilege, to state that in his opinion, the Commanding Officer, Major Leonard, merits much praise for the intelligent manner in which he has conducted the affairs of this post, both as to military efficiency and the economic administration.

He has been untiring in his efforts to instruct officers and enlisted men in all manner of drills and exercises and the Inspector does not hesitate to state that he believes this command, both commissioned and enlisted, to be unusually fit for any and all kinds of service.

Every officer and enlisted man has a good working knowledge of his profession and those who have shown especial aptitude in any of the practical branches, such as signaling or construction of bridges and defenses, have been given full opportunity to develop thorough knowledge in those subjects.

Discipline is maintained perfectly, but with a keen sense of justice and fairness and although the Inspector afforded every opportunity to all enlisted men to discuss their affairs with him, satisfaction only with conditions was the universal feeling of the men.

These statements are made after a close inspection lasting four days, during which the Inspector was observing carefully both day and night, everything that occurred, and he therefore believing himself fully informed as to conditions prevailing at this post.

The work done at this station for Inspector Magill consisted of making Gabions, Fuchies and Hurdies, one of material cut on the spot, constructing shelter trenches for skirmishers lying down, kneeling, and standing, building a spar bridge, constructing wire entanglements, picking shelter tents and all other kinds; boat drill, signaling with wig-wag, semaphore, heliograph and acetylene sign signal lamps; taking the inspection on a 16 mile road march and enroute having extended order and attack formations, advance and rear guard work and patrols, night fire drill (un-expected) and a day drill, in addition to the regular drills.

CONFIRMED AT NAVAL PRISON

Bishop Niles Administers Rite To 28 Men
Confined There

A most impressive ceremony took place at the Naval Prison on the Navy Yard, Sunday morning, when Bishop William Woodruff Niles, the senior Bishop of the New Hampshire diocese, laid his apostolic hands upon the bowed heads of twenty-eight men confined at the Prison, who had in the last three months gone through a careful course of instruction preparatory to the coming of the Bishop to administer this ancient and sacred rite of the Catholic Church.

The service began with a hymn, followed by the chaplain making his formal presentation of the class, and, by the authority of the Bishop, he then read the Gospel in the Confirmation Office.

Then began the individual presentations, the chaplain escorting each man in turn to the Bishop's throne, where he knelt down at the Bishop's feet, and received the Holy Ghost by the laying of the Bishop's hand in conformity with the ancient rite which has obtained in the Church from Apostolic days to the present moment.

It would be difficult to realize it possible that the men who received this ancient rite could ever forget the sacredness of the moment, when, as with the Saints and martyrs in the long centuries ago, they too, knelt at the feet of a servant of Christ, and received the same blessing which the Church has poured out on the heads of countless millions of the faithful. It was the voice of an aged apostle of Christ that spoke to the men at the conclusion of the Sacrament of Confirmation, beseeching that they learn the lesson which St. James urged, that they should resist the devil and he would flee from them; that they should draw near to God for in so doing we opened the way for God to draw nigh to us, and a man who kept his heart close to God in prayer, felt His presence, and His life at every turn in the way. "I want you," said the Bishop, "to find the true way to God and heaven,

I am an old man and shall soon enter into that world beyond, and therefore I want to tell you how you are to find the way. It is by resisting the devil, and keeping your heart close to God through prayer; by walking with God every day."

It was an impressive sight to see the venerable Bishop, sitting in his episcopal chair, infirm in body, but strong, logical, and convincing in his mind, appealing to the assembled men to strive for the better things, and that better way.

After the Bishop's inspiring address, the Chaplain celebrated the Holy Eucharist, the absolution and blessing being pronounced by the Bishop. Nearly fifty men had made their preparation for the Sacrament and came forward and knelt in the improvised chancel to receive the Blessed Body and Blood of our Lord, it being for twenty-eight of them their first Communion. One of the boys sang the sacred song "The Holy City" with much grace and musical effect.

This is the second Confirmation class Chaplain Dickens has had at the Prison this year, and another is taking form for next fall. On Easter Day thirty-one men received the sacrament of Baptism at the Chaplain's hands, making nearly eighty since he began his present tour of duty at this station.

Added to the many queer stunts of a south end goat, the long haired quadruped lately feasted on a new diet. His latest pickings were the choice crepe of one of the city's undertakers which he plucked from a door a short time after it had been placed there by the funeral director.

BASE BALL

HIGH SCHOOL 8 EXETER 6.

The Portsmouth high defeated Exeter in a game marked by many errors. Timmons was in the box for the local high and he pitched a very good game but got poor support. The locals showed an inability to hit the ball. Sheehy getting thirteen strikeouts. Hennessey did hit the ball for three singles, and played a good game although he added three large errors to seven scored by his team. Brackett at second played a good game and Call caught well.

With a little coaching Timmons and Call would make a good battery and with a few more shifts, the team will come along fast.

Ex-Big League Stars Helping Minneapolis Make Runaway Race in American Association

Minneapolis, May 8.—Joe Cantillon's wonderful respect for a previous winner, and the hard hitting Millers, with their pitchers going fairly well, are a tough proposition. Several of the games won by the Twin City outfit might almost have been captured by the opposition, but it's a habit of stronger clubs to win the close games. If the Millers continue their present gait for another month much of the interest in the ultimate disposition of the pennant will be dissipated in advance. The club is composed mostly

The Prudent Woman

Relies on the most famous family remedy the world knows—the safe, vegetable, and always efficient Beecham's Pills. In every family some one is sure to have the dull and heavy feelings, the headaches, the grouchiness, the nervousness which are signs of a disordered stomach, of a torpid liver, of inactive bowels. These troubles won't amount to much if Beecham's Pills are taken in time.

Wherever Beecham's Pills are known and used there is less growling, food tastes better and gives more nourishment—people are better able to do their work and find more enjoyment in life.

These matchless aids to health, strength and better feelings, tone the stomach, stir the liver, regulate the bowels, clear the system of poisonous bile. Besides, the dull eyes, the sallow skin, the pimples which afflict so many women take their leave when the blood is made purer and richer.

DENIAL BY DIRECTOR OF GEOLOGICAL SURVEY

No Adverse Decision Affecting Any Tract Under Weeks National Forest Law.

Washington, May 8.—The report which has been given some circulation that adverse action has been decided upon in the case of proposed purchase of National Forests in the White Mountain region is denied by the Director of the United States Geological Survey. Senator Gallinger and Representatives, Hinds, Weeks, and Peters have all brought this matter to the attention of Director Smith, and have received from him assurances that the rumor is without foundation.

Director Smith states that the responsibility of the United States Geological Survey is set forth in Section 6 of the Act which provides that preceding any purchase there must be an examination of the land by the Geological Survey with a favorable report to the Secretary of Agriculture "showing that the control of such lands will promote to protect the navigation of streams on whose watersheds they lie."

Although it has been definitely reported that the Geological Survey has condemned at least two of the New England rivers as not being navigable streams within the meaning of the Weeks Act, it is pointed out by Director Smith that such a statement contains a double error. In the first place, the determination of what are navigable streams within the meaning of this Act lies with the National Forest Reservation Commission and second, the position taken by the Geological Survey is that it is not warranted in prejudging the case of any area and that either a favorable or an unfavorable report must be preceded by actual field examination to determine all the factors in the local problem.

The Geological Survey is under the law the determinative agency whose certification is necessary to show that the land the purchase of which is contemplated has some material effect on stream flow and the protection of navigability. It is the position of the Survey that in general forest cover does promote and protect stream flow, but with the multiplicity of widely varying factors that enter into the problem as presented in each different locality the rule can not be given universal application.

While the Geological Survey is in possession of a large amount of data resulting from its many years of field surveys, topographic, geologic, and hydrographic, there is no cause for noted in which the officials of the Survey regard the material already in hand as sufficient to constitute the showing required by the Weeks law. It is, however, their purpose to obtain this needed additional information at once, and field men of the Survey are starting this week to examine areas in North Carolina and Tennessee, and at conferences in Secretary Fisher's office last week the Director of the Survey assured Governor Bass, of New Hampshire, Senator Gallinger, and Representative Weeks that examination within the White Mountain region would be begun this spring and the investigations continued through the coming field season.

Ohio's Legislative Bribery Scandal One of the Notable Political Sensations of the Generation.

The indictment of a number of members of the Ohio state legislature on charges of having taken money in return for their votes either in procuring the passage or defeat of certain bills bids fair to reveal a political scandal of gigantic proportions. The legislators indicted are not members of any one political faith, Republicans as well as Democrats being numbered among the accused. The case was worked up by Detective William J. Burns, who acquired notoriety in the San Francisco bribery and Oregon land fraud cases and more recently in the Los Angeles Times dynamiting affair. Senator George K. Cotone and Representative George E. Nye, whose pictures are here shown, are among the prominent legislators indicted. Prosecuting Attorney E. C. Turner promises to vigorously press the cases to trial.

DIED OF INJURIES

John William Poss, the foreman mason of the Noel Construction company, died at the Naval hospital at four o'clock on Saturday afternoon, from the injuries received in his fall on Thursday noon. Mr. Poss had a bad fracture of the skull and no hopes were held out for his recovery. He was a native of Alexandria, Va., and he leaves a mother and two brothers.

His body was on Sunday shipped to his home in Alexandria, Va., his two brothers who came here after the accident accompanying the body.

THEATRICAL TOPICS

Richard (Himself) Carle. Of musical comedies there is no end, and for one to rise above the commonplace requires that it shall possess distinctive merits, amusing situations, clever dialogue, bright music, an adequate company and the dominating personality of a star comedian. All these attributes are possessed in the highest degree by "Jumping Jupiter" in which Richard (Himself) Carle will be seen at Music Hall on May 18. Reports speak most highly of Mr. Carle's latest piece and it is known to have been received with marked favor and financial profit during its long run in Boston.

"Jumping Jupiter" is described as a farce with music. It was fashioned into a musical piece from Sydney Rosenfeld's "The Purple Lady," and Author Carle considerably supplied Comedian Carle with one of the best roles that he has ever played. At the same time the development of the story requires the services of an unusually strong cast. The show is smoothed and burnished as befits an entertainment which has won the trophy of permanent success. Mr. Carle has outdone himself in providing ludicrous situations and amusing dialogue, not only for himself but for the other principals. The performance is compact and snappy and goes with a whirl from start to finish.

As the music of "Jumping Jupiter" was written by Kari Hoselna of "Madame Sherry" fame it is reasonable to expect that it will contain a number of melodies and catchy songs. Indeed "Little Girl, I Love You," which runs through the piece, is said to be particularly charming. There are comedy numbers and stirrings ensembles in addition.

Edna Wallace Hopper (specially engaged) heads Mr. Carle's strong aggregation of players and singers. Miss Hopper has a particularly pert and pliant role which suits her admirably. A number of excellent songs fall to her lot, and her gowns will be the source of much interest and admiration to the ladies. Will H. Philbrick, the low comedian will be warmly welcomed; he has no superior in singing coon songs. Ina Chairo is a youthful imitator whose skill in mimicry is really marvellous. Joseph C. Miron, the well-known basso; Helen May, Burrell Baraberto, Helen Raymond, Lester Crawford, Jessie Cardowine, Isabelle Winloche, John Goldsworthy and a dozen handsome young women in minor roles complete this splendid company. "Jumping Jupiter" it is its scenery and costumes leaves nothing to be desired, lavish expenditure of money and good taste have made the production of visual delight. The orchestra is under the direction of Hans S. Linne.

MRS. RUTH A. WHITEMORE

The funeral of Mrs. Ruth A. Whittemore was held from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Vennard, 25 State street, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. William P. Stanley conducted the sad but beautiful service. He spoke very comforting to the bereaved ones. The house was filled with mourners and friends and all realized the loss sustained. Praise for the good she has done here, not only in her own home, but in many others; but it is now ended and the faithful hands that tended others may undisturbed take rest.

She leaves to mourn her loss three children. Mr. John R. Pridham of New Castle, Mrs. Esther J. Ricker of this city and Mr. Isaac H. Pridham of Cambridge, Mass.; also twenty-one grand children, forty-one great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandson, Master Elton Giles Vennard, with whose parents she made her home. time passed they had both worked within two blocks of each other on Washington street, Boston, and never had met. The meeting of the brothers here was doubly joyous for Bill as he now knows the whereabouts of two sisters in Vermont, who he has not seen or heard from in nearly twenty-four years.

GRAY HAIR MAKES YOU LOOK OLD; BANISH YOUR GRAY HAIR

By Using a Harmless Remedy Made From Common Garden Sage.

Gray hair is a mark of age, and nothing that can be said as to its beauty will effect the disadvantages of this mark of age set upon your brow.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy darkens the hair and restores it to its youthful beauty. Our grandmothers and their grandmothers before them used sage and sulphur for darkening their hair. Nothing has ever been found more effective for this purpose than these two time-honored remedies, but Wyeth, a modern chemist, has combined the two with other ingredients which makes a delightful dressing for the hair, and which not only removes every trace of dandruff but promotes the growth of the hair. It also stops the hair from falling out and makes it beautiful.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

HOWEVER questionable it may be about the world owing you a living, there can be no doubt that you owe yourself one.

Many people have excellent aim, but somehow they don't seem to understand what is game worth while.

There is a heap of difference between nerve and nerves.

There's many a slip between the cup and your lip.

Hefresses don't like to have the date blown in the glass.

Many a man has found matrimony a sort of lecture bureau.

As long as a man's credit is good he isn't supposed to be in debt at all.

There is reason in everything except a woman, and she can do without it just because.

Lots of people enjoy being fools as long as they aren't found out.

A man's education isn't complete until he takes a finishing course from his wife.

Humility is the most pleasing to us when it adorns our enemies.

Married men should be thankful that they don't have to sew on the buttons before they book up the dress.

The Modern Wizard.

The scientific farmer
Is all the goods today.
Soil juggling is his hobby
And training is his play.
He takes a bit of landscape
And figures to a dot
Which crops on it will prosper
And which will fade and rot.

It isn't many seasons
Since farmers east and west
Looked down on the professor
As something of a jest.
With their old fashioned notions
His ways were out of tune.
They planted their potatoes
According to the moon.

But now those days are over.
His hand is at the plow.
He plans the crop rotations
And tells the natives how.
He orders horse or barley,
Potatoes, oats or peas,
And an abundant harvest
He fully guarantees.

No more is brawn and muscle
The farming man's first aid.
'Tis not by sweat and lifting
That now he learns the trade.
He takes his little booklet
And reads a page or so,
And, following directions,
His crops are bound to grow.

"That's nice."

"I find it a gold mine."

"My face is my fortune."

"Why don't you work?"

"Me?"

"Yes."

"Why should I?"

"Blessed if I know."

"Why do they do it?"

"Maybe they fear punishment."

Pleasure and Duty.
A man should rise to heights sublime
And view the wonders new and strange.
A man should also rise in time
To build the fire in the kitchen range.

PETER PINDAR'S RUSE.

It Enabled the Astute Author to Drive a Good Bargain.

Some time about the beginning of the nineteenth century, Peter Pindar (Dr. John Wolcott) drove a good bargain with the publishers, Robinson & Walker. While negotiations were under way the author developed an attack of asthma, which was always at its most distressing stage whenever the publishers were present. He was only fifty-seven then, but the publishers decided that their chances were good and agreed to pay him a annuity of $250 instead of a lump sum for his work.

Soon after the bond was signed the doctor went to Cornwall, where he recovered his health, and returned to London without any cough, which was far from being a pleasing sight to the persons who had to pay his annuity. One day he called upon Mr. Walker, the manager for the parties, who, surveying him with a scrutinizing eye, asked him how he did. "Much better, thank you," said Wolcott. "I have taken the measure of my asthma; the fellow is troublesome, but I know his strength and am his master." "Oh!" said Mr. Walker gravely, and turned into an adjoining room, where Mrs. Walker, a prudent woman, had been listening to the conversation. Wolcott, aware of the feeling, paid a keen attention to the husband and wife and heard the latter exclaim: "There, now, didn't I tell you he wouldn't die? Fool that you've been! I knew he wouldn't die."

Peter Pindar survived both the parties.—New York Post.

CAUGHT ON THE BOUNCE.

The Parson's Second Barrel Play on the Wounded Ducks.

When the night wind whines about the gunning cabin nestled in the beach hills the hearts within grow reminiscent.

"The best canvasback shooting I ever had was down off the mouth of Crazy Inlet," said the parson. "A rippling northeaster was blowing, and I was out on the end of the point alone. The ducks came down wind along the edge of the shoal, and they were so far away that it was just impossible to kill them outright. I could have had a hundred shots that day, they came so thick, but I let a lot of them go by. At dark I had picked up twenty-two birds. Not one of them was dead when I dropped them as they wheeled by; but, boy, I didn't have to shoot a single cripple in the water."

Curley gave the parson a long look, filled and lighted his pipe, then snorted in disgust, for he was an old hand, and he knew that one needed more than a pinch of salt to capture a wounded canvasback in open water. "Suppose you hypothesized those birds you couldn't kill dead into coming ashore for you to wring their necks?" he grunted.

"No," said the parson slowly; "they were going so fast that when I knocked 'em down they'd hit the water and bound up ten or fifteen feet. Then I'd kill 'em on the first bounce with the second barrel."—Outing.

The Name Tibet. Many forms of the name Tibet sprang from the Chinese T'ibar (fifth century) through the variations of T'ueit, T'obert, T'ibet (1165), T'ebet (1258), to Tibet (1730). The origin of the name has been variously accounted for, but the weight of historical evidence indicates that the word is derived from T'ubai, a famous family name proper to several ancient Tartar dynasties, extensively used in the sense of "chief." Hodgson asserts that before the arrival of Indian teachers the people had no name for themselves or their land, and, though the present name is not, as some say, unknown to the country itself, the modern Tibetans call themselves Bod-pa and their land Bod-land, Bod being a Buddhist appellation suggested by the Sanskrit B'ud, or but, so working back to the Tartar name.—London Spectator.

Keen and Macready. When Edmund Keen and Macready, intense rivals, played in the same pieces at Drury Lane it was usual to consult them in the course of the evening as to what they would appear in next. One night when the prompter was sent to ask Mr. Macready what he would play with Mr. Keen the great tragedian frowned upon him till he blushed. "Sir," he roared, "how should I know what the man would like to play?" The prompter retired to seek the desired information from Mr. Keen. "Sir," said Mr. Keen sharply, "how should I know what the fellow can play?"

Analogies. "I understand your friend Jenkins has resigned that city clerkship he held."

"Resigned? H'm?"

"Oh, wasn't it voluntary?"

"Well, it was just as voluntary as his contributions to the campaign fund were."—Philadelphia Press.

The Riddle. "Woman is a riddle," remarked the Wise Guy.

"Yes," agreed the Simple Mug. "She keeps us guessing, and we hate to give her up."—Philadelphia Record.

Waiting. "Do man eat puts in too much time learnin' to wait patiently," said Uncle Eben, "is liable to sit out o' practice for doin' anything else."—Washington Star.

MEMBER OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT OVER 40 YEARS

A member of the Portsmouth fire department for upwards of 40 years and clerk of the Col Sise engine company, 2, for 25 years, is the record of Willard M. Gray of this city.

He was born in this city, Nov. 27, 1851, the son of William and Ellen S. Gray. His early education was gained in the Haven school; afterwards he entered the shoe factory of Thomas S. Norwell on State street, where he worked for a number of years. Of late years he has worked in the navy yard and in the city at painting.

He became a member of Sagamore engine company 2 in March, 1871, which then consisted of 40 men, William B. Randall, father of the present chief engineer, John D. Randall, being the foreman. When the company was reduced to 21 men he was transferred to Kearsarge engine company 3, serving there about one year as a hoseman.

He then returned to Col Sise company 2, which has succeeded the Sagamore company. He served the company in the capacity of clerk, assistant foreman and foreman. In 1888 he was elected a member of the board of engineers, serving under chief engineer Marden for eight years. He has also filled the office of president of the Portsmouth firemen's relief association for 12 years.

He is a past grand of Osgood lodge, 48, I. O. F.

His family consists of a wife, three sons, George W. Gray, a railway mail clerk; Fred A. Gray, a railway mail man, and Willard M. Gray Jr., all residents of this city.

North Hampton has had three forest fires in the past week and unless there is a heavy fall of rain soon more may be expected.

TOO MUCH 'MUCK RAKING'

One of New York's crying needs is that its newspapers recognize in some small degree the aptness of the motto, "Union is Strength." The metropolis has suffered in no small degree from the unjustified, disorganized and absurd muck-raking which many of its conscientious officials have undergone in the recent past.

New Englanders as well as natives of other sections of the country have been led to a certain degree to avoid New York as a result of receiving through its papers the mistaken idea that its government is in the hands of thieves and crooks. This deplorable condition of affairs is a direct outcome of ill timed abuse heaped upon the municipal management.

Approval of a public official by one newspaper is a signal for a scurrilous attack by another and vice versa. The removal of Police Commissioner Bingham, a thoroughly efficient and satisfactory man for the place, was but prompted by a newspaper squabble.

New York publishers could well afford to make mutual agreement to settle their various differences without immediately resorting to mud-slinging—better still, to stand together in matters pertaining to the welfare of the city.

BIRDS EYE VIEWS

So Diaz wants to resign, but his wife wouldn't let him. There may yet be a rebellion within a rebellion.

The ice trust, which loses in a long fight in New York, experienced a freeze-out too long after that handed to its progenitor, C. W. Morse.

Of course a turtle is more like a bird than a fish, as Prof. Verkes of Harvard declares; else why is a turtle dove?

Mail Clerk Sullivan's speedy trial and sentencing probably surprised the ordinarily lethargic court as much as they did the public.

Having settled the question of St. Patrick's birthplace to its own satisfaction, the Worcester school board should now enlighten the public as to Shakespeare's burial place.

One quarter of the Hoe library has been sold for nearly a million dollars, which suggests that part of the library must have been composed of mileage books.

President Taft says that Ambassador David Jayne Hill's resignation was not caused by his stand in the potash dispute between the United States and Germany. Guess again, people!

Collier's Weekly is authority for the statement that there is only one newspaper in the state not controlled by the Boston and Maine, which fabrication is good for an extra long "Brickbats and Bouquets" column in its next issue.

Transgressors might not the experience of the Tacoma pastor who declares that he made a false confession of wrong doing in order to see if a repeated sinner would be treated with Christian mercy. There is a suggestion of convenient loopholes in those "false confessions."

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES

President Taft and the Press.
President Taft is quoted as saying that he has no grievance against the press. Other men filling high public station undoubtedly entertain a similar feeling toward the newspapers. The reason for this sentiment is simple. The press has no unkind feeling toward any public official who is endeavoring to honestly discharge the duties of his office. The time was when Presidents and other officials were more or less unjustly assailed by strictly partisan journals, their public acts being misrepresented or depreciated. That style of journalism is practically dead. Newspapers nowadays are to be successful and influential must print fairly and impartially all sides of a controversy over politics or legislation, allowing the public to form its own judgment as to the merits of the matter under discussion.

An editorial which takes a wrong view of a matter closely affecting the status of a public official is harmful to the publication. Publishers and editors connected with an up to date journal have every incentive to be just and fair, not only to public men but to all their readers. There can be no desirable success for any newspaper that intentionally misrepresents any one.—Boston Globe.

Railroads and Tramps.

Now is the season when the "hobo" gentry fare forth from the cities in which they have hibernated, to prey upon the rural districts. They own no automobiles or teams, and they are too strong to walk far. Hence their dependence upon the railroads for transportation. They scrounge to have any considerable sum of money on their persons at any given time lest they be classed among malefactors of great wealth. Moreover, they are, as a rule, firm believers in the doctrine that the world owes them not only a living, but facilities for the pursuit of happiness, whatever their individual ideas of happiness may be, and whether the pursuit may lead them. Hence their penchant for riding free of charge. Officers of charitable organizations, who have made a study of the tramp problem, declare that stolen transportation is the root of the evil. It is estimated that the damage to railroad property every year, including thefts, amounts to about $35,000,000. The damage to individuals is also large, for many depredations upon private property are committed by vagrants who travel on freight trains. Furthermore, it is pointed out, tramps constitute a serious danger in railroad operation, as they cause accidents by tampering with the airbrake apparatus and other equipment.
Every year, about this time, come reports that this, that, or the other railroad has started a crusade against illegal train-riding. It is to be presumed that the roads which undertook this wholesome campaign several years ago are still engaged in it, and that those which are now taking up the cause will follow it with the persistent earnestness. Special railroad police forces are instructed to arrest all trespassers, and to have them prosecuted before the local magistrates. Fines will, of course, be levied, and if sentences will prevail. And if, as strictly followed, should be effective in reducing the number of stolen rides; for it is in the autumn, and not in the spring, that the genuine tramp relishes a term of imprisonment.—Manchester Union.

Prohibition in Maine.

One very suggestive development of the Bangor fire came to light in the iron-clad order of the Mayor of the city that the saloons close and stay closed until the first excitement was over. They obeyed and the Bangor drought is said to be complete. It will be ended, so it is hinted, when the police give the liquor sellers "permission to resume business."
The uninformed outsider might be pardoned for wondering how in prohibition Maine there could be regularly organized saloons; why they should close up on demand and why the authorities should at some future time give them the right to start again. How can an illegal business be compromised in any such way as that?
Those who know the facts are aware that in the Maine cities prohibition merely prohibits and does not prevent liquor selling. The law cannot be, or at any rate, is not enforced. This truth should have considerable influence when the whole matter is resubmitted to the voters at the next election.—Boston Post.

BRUSH FIRES
The ravages of brush fires Sunday were singularly destructive. Watchers on high eminences saw huge billows of smoke arising at various points of the landscape, marking the loss of many thousands of dollars invested in timberland and the threatening of life and dwellings and the scenes of arduous labors of regular and volunteer firefighters.
Of all the fires reported the one which occurred near Bow Mills was the most disastrous. Between seven and nine hundred acres of good timberland were burned over, and the house of three residents were saved only with great difficulty. The fire departments of all the cities had their hands full with demands for fires within their limits and were unable to give much heed to the pleas for assistance which poured in upon them.
The fire fiend stalked wild-eyed yesterday, leaving in his trail a blackened waste. North Hampton, New Hampton, Nashua, Londonderry, Concord Plains, Pembroke and Manchester all had their share.
In Maine, Biddeford, Sanford and Bangor suffered heavily.
The old sixty foot turntable formerly in use at the round house of the Boston & Maine railroad has been shipped to New Boston on the Southern division where it will be used in the future.

HOLLIS ANSWERS HAMPTON CRITICS

Allen Hollis of Concord, president of the Exeter, Hampton and Amesbury Street railway, has replied to the citizens of Hampton, who in a meeting April 5 passed resolutions against the railway. They contended, and passed a vote that the railway was not operated to the convenience of and that the rates were not suitable to the public. It was asked that a waiting station be erected near Hampton beach, to which President Hollis asserts that if consent can be procured from the Boston and Maine railroad to erect one on its land, that one will be erected if the cost is not too great.
In regard to the reduction of fares from North beach to South beach, the claim is that the line there is not a paying proposition in winter, but the experiment of one fare instead of two will be tried 1911. It proves not paying. The committee asked that

Our Great Industrial Future

HOLD FAST TO THE IDEALS OF THE AMERICAN HOME!

HOLD fast to the ideals and tradition of the American home and refuse to let the rush of modern business sweep them away. It is the part of the gentle bred men of the old days to keep up gentleness and breeding in the days to come.

Let me take you back forty years. Look at the business man of that day. See him returning from his office ten squares from home in the early afternoon. He dismounts from his horse and goes inside. Soon he returns to the place prepared for him. The horse has been played on the cobbles. He sits in cool comfort. His daughter twins her arms around him.

Again a picture which was drawn in the west. It is of a man worth fourteen million dollars. A lad from a farm, with the opportunities which America has offered, he has amassed great wealth. But the cost! At sixty he is ready to drop into a premature grave, a grave which should not claim for years.

We need to go back to some of the things of the days of old. We need to take time to reverence age, we need time to respect our women, to do justice to our children, and then something of the old contentment will be ours again.

RETIRE AFTER HALF CENTURY OF ACTIVITY

George A. Jackson of Dearborn street who last week announced that he should retire from his business of carpenter and builder which he had followed upwards of 50 years, was born in this city March 2, 1835, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson, in the household where he now lives. When 16 years old he entered the shipyard of George Raynes on Christian shore, and learned the trade of a ship joiner, which he followed up to the decline of ship-building on the Piscataqua river.

During his long and active career he has had several narrow escapes from serious accidents. While at work at Thomas E. Call & Son's lumber yard, about 2 years ago, the stage, on which he and several men were working collapsed, and threw the men into the river. The men got out and Mr. Jackson being unaided, they found him head down in the water, his overalls having caught on a spike and held him in that position. In October, 1905, while at work shingling a building on Washington street he fell to the ground, a distance of 35 feet. No bones were broken, but he received such a general shaking up that he was forced to remain indoors for some time.

Two years later he was struck by an electric car, hurled about 15 feet, but strange to say escaped serious injury.

For 45 years he was a member of the Portsmouth fire department. When 16 he joined the Franklin hand tub and when it was replaced by Piscataqua 4, he became a member of that company. He was afterward for two years a member of the Gov. Langdon 3, and then joined the Garibaldi hook and ladder company, holding all of the offices to foreman.

He was elected a member of the board of engineers in 1884, and served for 30 years in this capacity under Chief Engineers Alden and Sullivan.

In politics he was up to within a few years a staunch democrat, but for the past four years has not taken any active part. He served as a member of the board of aldermen and was for several years a valued member of the assessors of taxes.

In 1872, while a member of the fire department, he was one of the detail of men selected by Mayor Thomas E. O. Marvin to go from this city to assist in fighting the big fire in Boston, and assisted in the saving of the Old South church and other property in that section.

He is a charter member of Oak castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle. He married Miss Margaret Hilliard of New Castle, who died some years ago. As the result of the union six daughters and one son were born, three of whom are living. Mrs. Edmund F. Furbush, Mrs. George W. Jersey and Mrs. Charles B. Remick, residents of this city.

The Shining Morning Smile

is a trade winner. Try it. But man cannot live by morning trade alone. Therefore the smile should stay on the job all day. And not only should the merchant's face smile, but his store front, likewise his town. To make a store front smile keep it clean. Have a bright and attractive display in the window. If the merchant smiles and his store front smiles the customer will smile, and everybody will be happy. To make a town smile clean the streets and have attractive buildings and lawns.

Prosperity smiles while Failure has a frown.

Smile, smile, smile! Get the habit!

TEST GALLINGER'S PROSPECTS

The prospects of Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire to be president pro tempore of the Senate are to be tested out in a Republican caucus today. It is claimed there is likelihood of a deadlock because of insurgent opposition, which would make it impossible for Vice-President Sherman to leave Washington for more than a day at a time. He has the authority to designate a presiding officer for only 24 hours.

The Senate insurgents, who are bent on making more trouble for the regulars have been causing much of the time today to determine what course they should pursue. If they enter the Republican caucus Monday they will be bound by its verdict, which will be the nomination of Senator Gallinger to preside in the absence of the Vice-President. If they refuse to enter the caucus they will be endangering their status as Republicans, of which they are very careful.

There are several interesting parliamentary complications, which makes the quarrel of great moment around the Capitol.

NEW CASTLE

New Castle, May 8.

The soft and inspiring hand of real summer was very much in evidence in New Castle yesterday and it was very welcome but surprisingly unprecedented for this period, seemingly tending to even up the inclemencies of the tardy spring. Those marvelous days must pass, we do not mind to tell ourselves they surely will pass, but we have enjoyed the awakening. The emerald here that has overspread the lawns, the early flower spikes in the garden beds. The cry of the toad, to me is the one comprehensive sound of all those that I hear. Its strange power prominently reminds to some of the poets calls the "Terrene sound" or the voice of Mother Earth. I fancy the Indians translated it in some weird way. To him the cry of the toad fills the air; it has a charm to unlock one's thoughts and not only the present stands broadly out, but the long series of departed summers may come back again. It is a voice that either accentuates happiness or sadness.

BRUSH FIRES

RAVAGE STATE

The ravages of brush fires Sunday were singularly destructive. Watchers on high eminences saw huge billows of smoke arising at various points of the landscape, marking the loss of many thousands of dollars invested in timberland and the threatening of life and dwellings and the scenes of arduous labors of regular and volunteer firefighters.

Of all the fires reported the one which occurred near Bow Mills was the most disastrous. Between seven and nine hundred acres of good timberland were burned over, and the house of three residents were saved only with great difficulty. The fire departments of all the cities had their hands full with demands for fires within their limits and were unable to give much heed to the pleas for assistance which poured in upon them.

The fire fiend stalked wild-eyed yesterday, leaving in his trail a blackened waste. North Hampton, New Hampton, Nashua, Londonderry, Concord Plains, Pembroke and Manchester all had their share.

In Maine, Biddeford, Sanford and Bangor suffered heavily.

The old sixty foot turntable formerly in use at the round house of the Boston & Maine railroad has been shipped to New Boston on the Southern division where it will be used in the future.

A TIMELY TOPIC

HOLD FAST TO THE IDEALS OF THE AMERICAN HOME!

HOLD fast to the ideals and tradition of the American home and refuse to let the rush of modern business sweep them away. It is the part of the gentle bred men of the old days to keep up gentleness and breeding in the days to come.

Let me take you back forty years. Look at the business man of that day. See him returning from his office ten squares from home in the early afternoon. He dismounts from his horse and goes inside. Soon he returns to the place prepared for him. The horse has been played on the cobbles. He sits in cool comfort. His daughter twins her arms around him.

Again a picture which was drawn in the west. It is of a man worth fourteen million dollars. A lad from a farm, with the opportunities which America has offered, he has amassed great wealth. But the cost! At sixty he is ready to drop into a premature grave, a grave which should not claim for years.

We need to go back to some of the things of the days of old. We need to take time to reverence age, we need time to respect our women, to do justice to our children, and then something of the old contentment will be ours again.

RETIRE AFTER HALF CENTURY OF ACTIVITY

George A. Jackson of Dearborn street who last week announced that he should retire from his business of carpenter and builder which he had followed upwards of 50 years, was born in this city March 2, 1835, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson, in the household where he now lives. When 16 years old he entered the shipyard of George Raynes on Christian shore, and learned the trade of a ship joiner, which he followed up to the decline of ship-building on the Piscataqua river.

During his long and active career he has had several narrow escapes from serious accidents. While at work at Thomas E. Call & Son's lumber yard, about 2 years ago, the stage, on which he and several men were working collapsed, and threw the men into the river. The men got out and Mr. Jackson being unaided, they found him head down in the water, his overalls having caught on a spike and held him in that position. In October, 1905, while at work shingling a building on Washington street he fell to the ground, a distance of 35 feet. No bones were broken, but he received such a general shaking up that he was forced to remain indoors for some time.

Two years later he was struck by an electric car, hurled about 15 feet, but strange to say escaped serious injury.

For 45 years he was a member of the Portsmouth fire department. When 16 he joined the Franklin hand tub and when it was replaced by Piscataqua 4, he became a member of that company. He was afterward for two years a member of the Gov. Langdon 3, and then joined the Garibaldi hook and ladder company, holding all of the offices to foreman.

He was elected a member of the board of engineers in 1884, and served for 30 years in this capacity under Chief Engineers Alden and Sullivan.

In politics he was up to within a few years a staunch democrat, but for the past four years has not taken any active part. He served as a member of the board of aldermen and was for several years a valued member of the assessors of taxes.

In 1872, while a member of the fire department, he was one of the detail of men selected by Mayor Thomas E. O. Marvin to go from this city to assist in fighting the big fire in Boston, and assisted in the saving of the Old South church and other property in that section.

He is a charter member of Oak castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle. He married Miss Margaret Hilliard of New Castle, who died some years ago. As the result of the union six daughters and one son were born, three of whom are living. Mrs. Edmund F. Furbush, Mrs. George W. Jersey and Mrs. Charles B. Remick, residents of this city.

And not only should the merchant's face smile, but his store front, likewise his town. To make a store front smile keep it clean. Have a bright and attractive display in the window. If the merchant smiles and his store front smiles the customer will smile, and everybody will be happy. To make a town smile clean the streets and have attractive buildings and lawns.

TEST GALLINGER'S PROSPECTS

The prospects of Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire to be president pro tempore of the Senate are to be tested out in a Republican caucus today. It is claimed there is likelihood of a deadlock because of insurgent opposition, which would make it impossible for Vice-President Sherman to leave Washington for more than a day at a time. He has the authority to designate a presiding officer for only 24 hours.

The Senate insurgents, who are bent on making more trouble for the regulars have been causing much of the time today to determine what course they should pursue. If they enter the Republican caucus Monday they will be bound by its verdict, which will be the nomination of Senator Gallinger to preside in the absence of the Vice-President. If they refuse to enter the caucus they will be endangering their status as Republicans, of which they are very careful.

There are several interesting parliamentary complications, which makes the quarrel of great moment around the Capitol.

NEW CASTLE

New Castle, May 8.

The soft and inspiring hand of real summer was very much in evidence in New Castle yesterday and it was very welcome but surprisingly unprecedented for this period, seemingly tending to even up the inclemencies of the tardy spring. Those marvelous days must pass, we do not mind to tell ourselves they surely will pass, but we have enjoyed the awakening. The emerald here that has overspread the lawns, the early flower spikes in the garden beds. The cry of the toad, to me is the one comprehensive sound of all those that I hear. Its strange power prominently reminds to some of the poets calls the "Terrene sound" or the voice of Mother Earth. I fancy the Indians translated it in some weird way. To him the cry of the toad fills the air; it has a charm to unlock one's thoughts and not only the present stands broadly out, but the long series of departed summers may come back again. It is a voice that either accentuates happiness or sadness.

FOUR ANSWERED LAST SUMMONS

Ranks of Storer Post Depleted Since Last Meeting By Death of Members

Four more men who formerly wore the treasured bronze button were absent from the roll call of Storer post, G. A. R. Sunday in Grand Army Hall. They were recorded in the increasing ranks of heroes that have passed on, and by their deaths depleted the ranks of the veterans who warred the civil strife.

James T. Marshall died May 15, 1910. He served with Honor in Company K, Twelfth regiment, New Hampshire volunteers at Fredericksburg and Antietam. Storer E. Stiles died Aug. 22, at Fryeburg, Me., his body worn down finally by the exposure he suffered on southern fields, and Charles W. Shannon died in this city Oct. 31. The members of the post marched to his grave in South cemetery and will this year designate with the customary symbols of respect. The last death of which the post took recognition Sunday was of Rear Admiral David B. Macomb, U. S. N., retired, who died this year at his home in New York. Mr. Macomb, who was chief engineer of the navy, was one of the most enthusiastic veterans. Three days before his death he wrote a check payable to the post for a year's membership fee in advance.

Grand Army hall was tested this afternoon by the relatives and friends who united in the annual memorial service of the remaining veterans. Mayor Daniel W. Badger, Superintendent James A. Macdougall of the school department and the Rev. L. L. Gaither, pastor of the First Methodist church, were among the special guests, while the officers of Henry L. Richards camp, U. S. W. V., and Storer Relief corps occupied prominent posts. Commander Charles E. Oliver and ex-Mayor Edward H. Adams of the Sons of Veterans were in charge of the ushering.

The written ritual prescribed for memorial service of the Grand Army was delivered by Commander Edwin Underhill, Senior Vice Commander Charles T. Winslow, Junior Vice Commander Henry S. Paul and Chaplain Meshach H. Bell. The address was delivered by the Rev. David M. Tolson, rector of St. John's church. At the conclusion of the service the memorial ritual of Storer Relief corps was exemplified by Mrs. Lillian Shannon Humphreys, Mrs. Oriatha Garth, Mrs. Bertha Smart and other officers. Several appropriate local selections were rendered by the Lyric male quartet, composed of Messrs. Silver Caswell, Merrow and Blibrock.

EULOGIES FOR YARD OFFICIALS WERE ILLEGAL

Boston lodge of machinists will investigate the recent action of certain foremen at the Charlestown Navy Yard who secured signatures to a testimonial praising the administration of navy yard officials. Congressman Gardner has heard of the testimonials.

Such procedure is a violation of navy regulations or petitions either in praise or condemnation of any person connected with the service.

Commander Edward L. Beach, U. S. N., head of the machinery division of the yard, stopped the circulation of the testimonial as soon as the matter was brought to his attention.

WORKMEN WANTED

Public Works Department at Navy Yard Has Much Business.

Civil Engineer L. E. Gregory, head of the department of public works at the navy yard told the Herald man today that his department is needing many men especially joiners, carpenters and laborers for the work in the department. He states that men who register for any part of the large amount of work there will be called for duty as fast as they register. But the big appropriations which become available in this department in July there is likely a summer's work ahead for those who seek employment. He is anxious to have local labor in every way possible and it is hoped that people who can will respond to the call in the can will respond to the call.

ONLY A WAX HEAD

Two boys, named Dow and Welch, living in the McDonough street district, started people on the jump on Sunday by the report that they had discovered a human head floating in the water of the North pond about thirty feet from the shore, in the rear of the machine shop. The lads took a quick look at the object and made a rush to inform the police.

Some of the people living near by went to the pond and found that the boys had been looking at the wax head of a woman that is used in the windows of millinery shops to display the varieties of female headgear. The boys on their return to the pond soon broke up the floating image with rocks and appeared then to be entirely satisfied at being stung in this way.

Killing One Fly.

Every fly begins as an egg deposited in some kind of organic filth. It hatches into a tiny maggot within a few hours, begins to feed and grow, completes its growth and comes out as a perfect fly in possibly ten days. It then requires at least fourteen days to mature its first batch of eggs, and it may live to mature and deposit at least six layings, of from 120 to 150 eggs each. This means that in killing one fly we may be preventing the hatching of nearly a thousand others.—Youth's Companion.

QUARTER MILLION GALLONS A DAY

Water Running to Waste by Break in Pipe Line—Discovery Saves City $10,000 a Year.

A leak in the main line of the water works, which was discovered Saturday has been costing the city the loss of 25,000 gallons of water a day. The discovery was made by the New York company who are testing out all of the mains for leakage and this discovery alone will save the city $10,000 a year.

The break was in such a place that it might go for years before it was discovered as the waste water was being taken care of by a sewer and running off into the North Pond. Had it occurred at any other point it would have been discovered in a few hours as the street would have been undermined.

The company use what is known as a Pitograph and it measures the pressure and records the waste or leakage. A large waste was recorded in the test on the main line on Islington street and by a series of tests it was finally located.

It was a peculiar situation. In front of the Frank Jones Brewing company's plant, the main water line passes through an old box sewer that was used years ago to take the waste from the plant to North Pond. This sewer is 6 by 4 feet and when the city built the main sewer to relieve North Pond, the brewing company ran a new line into that, discarding the old sewer. It was found that one of the joints in the water pipe had blown out and the water that leaked out was running back into the sewer and running into the pond. There was no surface indication of the break and it might have gone for years undiscovered, in fact it may have been in existence for some time past.

City Engineer Parker had a gang of men at work on Sunday and the repairs were made before night. It was necessary to shut off the water on the main line for a short time.

The estimate is that 250,000 gallons of water was running to waste every day and had this continued for a year it would be costing the city even at the minimum rate at least $10,000.

It is anticipated that the company making the test will reduce the leakage so that it will pay the city a great many times over for the work. As a matter of fact the Islington street discovery is sufficient to pay for the entire contract several times.

B. F. Bush, New President of Missouri Pacific.

The election of Benjamin Franklin Bush, president of the Western Maryland railroad, to the presidency of the Missouri Pacific railroad indicates that the control of the management of the system is to remain in the hands of the Goulds. Commenting on the selection of Mr. Bush, George Gould said:

"I was much influenced in my advocacy of his election by the results he has attained in his administration of the Western Maryland property and by the esteem in which I know he was held by Mr. Rockefeller, who is a largely interested in the Western Maryland and who, next to our family, is the largest stockholder in Missouri Pacific."

Mr. Bush, head of Missouri Pacific began his railroad career in 1882 as a railroadman with the Northern Pacific. He soon rose to be a division engineer. The Oregon Improvement company next employed him as chief engineer and general superintendent. He was with the Northwestern Improvement company as general manager and with the Western Coal and Mining company as vice president. In 1907 he was sent to Baltimore as fuel agent for the Missouri Pacific. The Goulds put him into the Western Maryland. At the same time he served as president of the Davis Coal and Coke company and as president of the Pittsburgh Terminal Railroad and Coal company, succeeded by the Pittsburgh Coal company. He is fifty-one and a native of Wrightsburg, Pa.

New Senator From Montana.
Henry L. Myers of Montana, who succeeded Thomas H. Carter as United States senator, is little known outside his state, but has been prominent in Montana politics for the past fifteen years. Senator Myers is known as an experienced warrior. Together with State Senators Whiteside and Clark, he made a long and arduous struggle against the seating of former Senator William A. Clark, the copper magnate, at the time of the latter's first election to the United States senate in 1899. That contest resulted in the unanimous finding of the senate committee on elections against the seating of Mr. Clark, who resigned his seat. Senator Myers is a native of Missouri and will be forty-nine years old next October. As a boy he worked on his father's farm, later taught school, became a newspaper man and finally studied law and was admitted to the bar. He moved to Montana in 1893 and opened a law office at Hamilton. He served two terms as prosecuting attorney of Ravalli county and in 1898 was elected state senator. The new senator is described by his friends as an old school Democrat.

Matching For a Dog

It Seemed the Only Way to Determine Its Ownership

By F. A. MITCHELL
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

A boy of seven on being told to write a story about a dog wrote it as follows:

I love Shep, and Shep loves me. That was all there was of the composition.

Shep was a collie dog, and a very intelligent one. The only other case I have ever known of equal love between a human being and a brute was between my pointer fox and myself. I used Rex for hunting woodcock. How I did love that dog, and how he did love me! Why in the world he couldn't speak to me I don't know. He could talk with his eyes, though not with his tongue. Many a conversation I have had with him, I speaking with my voice, he with his eyes.

Rex was stolen from me, and I didn't see him again for several years.

One October I was hunting in another field. I had possessed other dogs

"CALL HIM, PLEASE"

than Rex, but did not get attached to any of them, and often would hunt without one. This was the case with me on this autumn morning. As I stalked through a wood, kicking dead leaves—a favorite amusement of mine—I heard some animal bounding toward me, and through the bushes between the trees came a dog. I recognized Rex at once. He ran to me, put his fore paws on my shoulder, and if ever a dog cried for joy he did. As for me, I put my arms around his neck, and I'm not sure but my eyes, too, were wet.

The next thing I was conscious of was looking at a very pretty girl with a big hat on her head, a pair of gamines on her hands and a whip such as ladies use when walking out with a dog. I lifted Rex's paws from my shoulders and my hat from my head. There was fire in the girl's eye which my deference did not allay.

"What's the matter with my dog?" she snapped, laying great stress on the word "my."

"Your dog?"

"Yes, my dog. Whose else should it be?"

"Mine."

What a laugh came out of that pretty throat! It wasn't really a laugh, but an expression of anger, contempt, irony, derision. I confess I was a bit miffed by it.

"You say the dog is yours," I said, trying to speak pleasantly. "If he is yours he will follow his mistress. Call him, please."

"Jack! Come here, Jack! Do you hear me?"

Rex looked at her and wagged his tail, but did not move.

"You don't even know the dog's name," I said. Then, moving away, I called, "Come, Rex," and he bounded after me. But I noticed that he kept looking back at his mistress. After moving some twenty paces I stopped.

If ever there was a mad girl that one was.

"How dare you try to steal my dog?" she snapped viciously.

"Steal your dog? I don't need to steal your dog. He knows his master and follows him."

"Jack! Come here," she stamped her little foot in a vain attempt to enforce obedience.

"Let me have your whip," I said. "I'll see if I can drive him back to you."

I took the whip from her hand and, giving the dog a cut, ordered him away from me. He got down on the ground and cringed and whined, but he wouldn't leave me. The girl was beside herself with anger and disappointment. It was plain that she loved him as well as I did.

"Pardon me," I said to her. "I should have explained to you that this dog once belonged to me. I lost him, and he now appears to be your property. He's the nearest to a human being of any brute I ever knew."

"He isn't a brute; he's a human animal."

"And should be treated as a human animal. His affections should not be interfered with."

"Nor my affections either."

"He should be permitted to dwell with the one he loves best."

This was a thrust that didn't suit her. "You mean," she said, "that he should live with the one who loves him best?"

"Very brightly turned, but woman's logic—a conclusion based on no premises. It seems to me this is a triangular affair."

She opened her eyes, as if wondering what that could be.

"You love the dog; I love the dog. The dog loves you and loves me. One leg of the triangle is missing."

"Which leg? What leg?"

"The one between you and me. There is love between you and the dog and love between me and the dog, but none whatever between you and me."

"I should think not!"

I repressed a smile. "Well," I said, "what are we going to do about it?"

"I bought Jack—Jack, I say. He is not Rex, as you call him, at all. I bought Jack for $10, and he's my dog."

"I didn't get the $10."

"That's nothing to me."

"I'll match you for him."

Now, while by matching her for the dog I meant to play at heads and tails with a coin, she was so pretty, so feminine in her bursts of impotent anger, that in my heart I intended to convey the impression that I wouldn't mind settling the ownership of the dog by a union of claimants.

"What do you mean by matching for him?" she asked.

I took two coins from my pocket and gave her one, laid the other covered on the back of my hand and asked her to show one side of the coin I had given her. She showed me "heads." I uncovered my coin, and it was "tails."

"The dog is mine," I said.

Again she bristled.

"You were to match me and failed," I added.

"Well, I declare!"

She could not evidently find words to express her horror and contempt at my taking such an advantage of her. She tossed the coin at me viciously, but I caught it.

"That method of deciding the matter between us doesn't seem to please you."

"I should say not. Besides, there's nothing to decide. The dog belongs to me."

"But how are you to prevent his going home with me? You saw that I couldn't drive him away."

This was a stumper. She made no reply. She was evidently trying to think of a way out of it.

"You will tire yourself standing," I said. "Won't you be seated on this log?"

"No, I thank you."

"Then you will pardon me for sitting while you stand. I'm very tired, and I see no way of coming to an agreement."

I sat down, took a pipe from my pocket and proceeded to fill it, asking if she would mind my smoking. She did not reply, and since silence gives content I lit the pipe.

"I suppose," she said presently, "I'll have to pay you for the dog. It's very mean of you, but—"

"I don't wish to sell him."

"Then what in the world are we going to do?"

"I think we'd better have a conference."

"We seem to be having one, a very long and disagreeable one."

"If you will sit down and talk reasonably I believe we can come to a satisfactory agreement."

She looked a long while at the log and finally sat down on its other end.

"Now," I said, pulling a cloud, "what do you propose?"

"What do you propose?"

"I proposed a match, but you didn't appear to like that way."

"It's perfectly absurd."

"Nevertheless I'm quite resolved that it shall be settled by that plan."

She thought for some time while I read what she was thinking in the expression of her face. By matching she would have an equal chance of winning the dog. By refusing she would surely lose him, for he would go with me. I got out the coins again.

"I match you this time," I said.

"Best two in three."

She sat looking straight ahead of her, not deigning to notice the coin I had laid out on the log for her. (Hanging at it, I saw "heads" was up. I cried "tails!" Then, examining her coin and mine, I told her she had won on the first trial. This induced her to take some interest in the proceedings. I took care that she should win again and told her the dog was her property.)

"But how am I to get him away from you?" she said in a more pleasant but puzzled tone.

"I don't see how you can," I replied, "unless I go with you."

"That's the plan," she said, much pleased. "You go with me, and I'll chain him to his kennel."

"Are you sure you won't chain me too?"

"How ridiculous!"

It certainly was ridiculous, for she had me chained already, but I wasn't locked for a year afterward, when my matching plan, as I really intended it, was carried out and the dog passed into our united possession. All of which was nice for the dog, nice for the girl and lastly delightful for me. I often told my wife upon her stupidity in not having understood my double meaning on our first meeting, whereupon she says she saw through the whole thing.

And I'm not quite sure but she did.

YEOMAN JAILED FOR SAVING CHUM

Now On Southern While Friend Has Liberty

Officials Were Displeased at Letters To Fraternal Order

Recently a yeoman by name of Nettles, who has been connected with the ship's company of the U. S. S. North Dakota was brought to the prison ship Southern to serve a sentence imposed by the navy court martial board, which sentence was the result of a good turn said to have been performed by Nettles to help free his shipmate, another yeoman by the name of Brin. The trouble all started on the last cruise of the big sea fighter to France.

While in port there Brin is said to have got in trouble on the public street in company with others of a liberty party.

The result was a trial by court martial board who found him guilty and has sentenced him to the prison here and was approved by the navy department.

Both men were members of Masonic orders and it is said that Nettles in the interest of getting his shipmate released took up correspondence with that fraternity. He was successful and Brin only served a few days of the sentence imposed. He was ordered restored to duty by the secretary of navy and went back to the vessel with his full rank. In the meantime some of the mail which passed between the Masons and Nettles fell into the hands of the navy department and the correspondence therein is said to have severely criticised the action of the navy board of court martial, claiming that Brin did not receive justice in his trial and that the whole thing was cut and dried.

This led to another court martial in which Nettles was the accused. The court found him guilty and ordered him to serve a year which sentence was finally reduced to six months.

Thus Nettles in his fight for his friend got more time than the man he helped to free.

Both men have excellent records in the service, especially on the North Dakota, where they are exceedingly popular with the crew.

FIREGRAPHS

At Taunton Mass no telephone calls are permitted after 9 o'clock at night in the fire department houses except where the business of the dept. demands. Why not so here?

Why did that member of the reliable company who rode to the Daxel street fire on the combination wagon leave the fire when an alarm was ordered?

It is hoped that some of our steamers will not be called to a long draft until some repairs are made and the sooner the better.

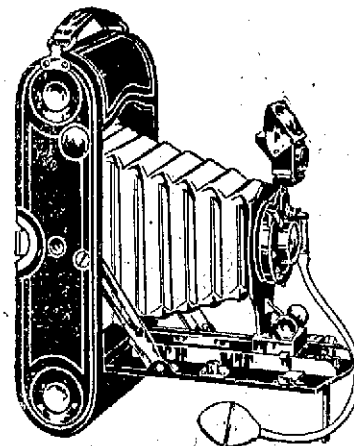

It seems a pity that a man who served with credit 30 years in the fire department should not be cared for in a different way.

The permanent men who get up and hustle and keep most of the fires in check seem to have got a black eye in the matter of an increase of pay. Some day the firemen's vote will count.

The Chronicals are satisfied. Sure they are they have accomplished their purpose.
